International DLG Prize

The advancement award is targeted at junior staff in agriculture and the food industry. Every year the DLG awards scholarships for further education to young professionals in agricultural and nutrition sciences aiming to foster personal and professional development. You can apply for the International DLG Prize if: you are under the age of 36, you have practical experience in agriculture or the food industry, you actively volunteer, you are open-minded and outgoing beyond national borders and like to think outside the box and you have a clear goal in mind. Application is possible until March 1. Further information is available here.

e-Dialogue: COVID-19 and its Effects on Local Food Systems and Rural Livelihoods

The UN Sustainable Development Solutions Network (SDSN) hosts multiple talks that dive into how and why agriculture is an important source of food and income for most rural households but needs to be seen in the context of multiple livelihood activities - both on and off the farm - as a large proportion of small and medium producers in Africa live in poverty and fail to achieve a 'living income' from farming alone. The next e-Dialogues will be on February 9 starting at 14:00. You can register here. More information is available here.

Recordings from the 14th Global Future for Food and Agriculture

This year's annual centered around "Sustainable Land Use: Food Security Starts with the Soil", with insights from 120 speakers. They share their knowledge on for example land transformation, land use management as well as finance. You can learn more here.
