

Exam registration for the summer term

Exam registration on BASIS for this semester starts on May 1, and the deadline for registration is Tuesday, June 15! Don't forget to register for all your exams including assignments, homework, and seminar papers you did or will do during the semester as well as the written and oral exams. Withdrawal from all written and oral exams is possible up to one week before the respective examination date. For further deadlines see here.

Dies Academicus on May 19

Whether there will be a digital program for the Dies Academicus it not clear yet. More information will be online closer to the date here. Usually, the Dies Academicus offers for students the possibility to consider other fields of studies and regular lectures doesn't take place at this day.

Pentecost break

From 24th to 29th of May students of the University of Bonn will have a one week holiday where no lectures will take place. For AFECO students who attend the module "BAS-120 Excursion in Agricultural and Food Economics" the excursion will take place in this week and unfortunately due to the COVID-19 situation solely online. For further information regarding the schedule please check out the eCampus course.

Writing your Master thesis

Summer term is for many students the time to put their accumulated knowledge into practice and to start writing their Master thesis. Please find all information on how to register your thesis, guidelines for writing and the template to use at the ILR here.

R course material

For those students who work with R and are still interested in an R course as a supplement to the modules, Prof. Dr. Biber-Freudenberger has now decided to make the course materials available to all interested. Unfortunately it is not possible to open the course to even more students but you can access the materials here which will be extended continuously. So, if you are interested in improving your R skills, please have a look.

Alternative innovations for the bioeconomy - or what kind of technologies do we need for a just socio-ecological transformation?

On May 7 from 10-12 am, the research group "Bioeconomy and Inequalities" of the University of Jena invites you to a lecture on alternative technologies for a bioeconomy and the assessment of innovations for a just socio-ecological transformation as part of an online event series. International Association of students in Agricultural and related Sciences

For this month testimonial, we would like to introduce IAAS to you. The association is the biggest international student organization in the field of agriculture and related sciences. It was founded in 1957 with eight member countries. Since then, it has expanded its international reach to over 50 member countries. Through annual events, trainings and exchange programs, IAAS follows its mission of promoting the exchange of experience, knowledge and ideas and to improve the mutual understanding between students in the field of agricultural and related sciences all over the world.

Mainly, IAAS is a global network of young and motivated people with about 10,000 students as members and more than 100,000 alumni. Is IAAS already represented by your country?

Check out the map and become a member or create a country membership for your home country. For a country membership, a national director and a national exchange coordinator is needed. Together they form a national committee which can be supported by other helpful positions such a vice president of finance or even local committees.

In face of the current situation, IAAS has launched a podcast this February. With weekly releases of a new episode, the content allows to get a personal insight of the challenges and inspirations other students and graduates in our field of study experience in academia, by going abroad or in their first jobs. You can for example listen to Jacob-John from Sierra Leone explaining the importance of information systems for agriculture and how education empowers kids.

To hear more, you may want to check out the podcast (Spotify, Apple Podcasts) yourself or visit their webpage. Moreover you can find IAAS on facebook, twitter and LinkedIn.
