

Tuition and administrative fees

The tables show the total fees for each combination of first- and second-year universities. All amounts are in euros (€) and include tuition and administrative fees.

How to read the tables: select your first-year university in the rows and your second-year university in the columns.

| UCL <sup>b</sup>             | 5,515            | 5,435  | —                | 5,435  |
| UCSC                         | 6,580            | 6,500  | 11,935           | —      |

<sup>a</sup> SLU: depending on the student's country of origin – please check the SLU website. <sup>b</sup> UCL: depending on the student's country of origin. Students from one of the countries listed in Appendix 1 to 3 of this document pay a smaller fee. More information here.

Students pay the university tuition fees and any other administrative fees directly to their first- or second-year AFEPA main partner university, by the deadline shown in the table above. The main partner university confirms the amount and the payment deadline to admitted students during registration.

Associated partner universities do not charge tuition fees, but students may have to pay small administrative fees. Students also cover their own travel and accommodation costs during their study stay.

Language course fees

Students can take a preparatory language course before or during their first or second academic year: German at UBonn, French at UCLouvain, Swedish at SLU and Italian at UCSC. The intensive courses before the first semester run for several weeks and cost between 250 and 500 euros, depending on the university.

The language course is not mandatory, but it is recommended. It is a good way to get to know the university and the city before the academic year officially starts. Besides the language itself, the courses usually include practical elements: field trips to discover the local culture, and sessions on how to open a bank account, where to register as a student or where to find the cheapest mobile phone plan.

Students pay the language course fee directly to the institution organising the course when they sign up.

Summer school fees

For each of the two mandatory summer schools, the AFEPA coordination office may charge a fee of up to 300 euros per student. This covers the venue, guest speakers, field trips and social events. The AFEPA coordination office always tries to keep these costs as low as possible. The fee does not cover travel and accommodation. Students pay the fee to the AFEPA coordination office before the summer school begins.

Other fees

Depending on their country of origin, students may have additional costs for application documents, visas and residence permits. These are not included in the university tuition fees.
